Watch this short video. I'll then demonstrate how to apply them to a real project of my own. Digital Anarchy Pro 5.1.2 This is a demonstration of digital Anarchy Pro Chromakey 5.1.2 - It's a special filter released with this product. Digital Anarchy is one of the most popular effects available in Blur Studio Pro 2. We also recommend checking out our Blur Studio Pro 2 walkthrough for professional tutorials. With the Digital Anarchy Pro Chromakey 5.1.2 filter, you can apply a single color for all greenscreen footage or apply a different color for a specific background (eg. something blue against a red background.) There are over two dozen color mappings available. By tweaking the color mapping, you can alter everything from the hue, saturation and brightness of the color to the overall blending of the color. Just pick a color and your greenscreen video turns into a glowing, surreal object. To apply the Digital Anarchy Chromakey 5.1.2 filter, simply open the filter set. There are 11 different filter sets. You can view the entire list by clicking the filter icon on the menu bar. Double-click the specific filter set you want to use. Then, apply the filter. Don't forget to experiment with the different color mappings until you find the one you want. When you are satisfied with the final result, save the filter set. You can even apply multiple colors to your images at once. Select one or more colors to apply to all of the greenscreen footage. You can also apply a different color to each shot in the scene. Just set up different color mappings and choose which one you want for each separate shot. You can also use the Chromakey filters to create digital animals and special effects. An attendant leads the patient down a corridor, a few steps to an elevator. The attendant presses the button and the patient is whisked away. Behind the front doors of the hospital is the stylishly decorated waiting room. The waiting room has about twenty hospital beds. On one wall are several television screens. You can watch the news or hear the latest gossip on the various pop stars and politicians. One television screen shows news about the use of methamphetamine as a treatment for Alzheimer's. This new method of treatment is not only expensive, but also causes the patient to suffer from epileptic fits. In the waiting room there are pictures of beautiful women and women with unglamorous facial expressions hung on the wall. A painting shows a noble looking man, sitting in a luxurious office in a business suit. The other wall is covered with posters of political posters bearing the messages "Vote for me!", "He is the best!", "Hand over our money!", etc. There are also photos of politicians there, as well as gifts for donors. There is a small bar in the waiting room, and after a while the intercom is activated. A young doctor tells the patient to come in. The patient is guided into the examination room. "What's the problem, what are you experiencing?" the doctor asks. "A faint headache and slight nausea," the patient answers. The doctor thinks for a while. "Oh, is the medication of any use?" "No, it has been tried." "All right, well then, let's try a bit of a different medication, if you don't mind." "I am completely in control of my actions. I shall do what I want." "And how do you feel at the moment?" "The last fifteen hours have passed in a flash. The day has been long, but short." "An unexpected 3e33713323
