The animation shows a comic-like scene for a few days where there is a "banner" that is supposed to cover up everything and then it disappears, revealing the main scene. To achieve this I have a few sprites that are attached as layers to the main movie clip and I am inserting one of them with a keyframe animation. I would like it to start in a hidden position and only on the second day or so, it slowly goes on the way it is supposed to without showing the "banner". I have already figured out how to achieve that, what I would like to do now is can I make it start a bit smoother with the animation can I make it look "wobbly", like a shaky, unsteady start would do? Author: Writing in APA Style Description is an e-book written by Professor Ana Belén Stotz.Q: MySQL - Current date formatted as "dd-M-yyyy" Is there any way to get the current date formatted like "yyyy-M-dd"? I can do it using php but I was wondering if it is possible to do this using sql alone. A: Yes, if you want the date in MySQL as well you need to write a bit of PHP in addition to a MySQL statement. SELECT SUBSTRING(CONCAT(YEAR(CURRENT_DATE),'-',MONTH(CURRENT_DATE),'-',DAY(CURRENT_DATE)),1,4) AS 'yyyy-M-dd' Although the above works, it's not the best option. I would recommend using a much simpler approach: SELECT SUBSTRING('2014-11-30',1,4) AS 'yyyy-M-dd' Q: Python 3 and matplotlib: Creating a plot with lines containing text I've not been able to find an answer to this question yet. I'm trying to create a plot in Python 3 with text embedded into the lines. The text in the lines should be independent of the plot axes (i.e. the text will remain static even if the axes are resized). The
