The new Lone Pine Branch DLC will build on the strengths of Trainz, adding a new route, new features, and new locomotives to the game! Lone Pine Branch consists of two locations: The Mojave Yard is at the Northern end of the branch The Southern Crossing is at the Southern end of the branch • Mojave Yard In the Mojave Yard, you'll find the Mojave Division, who owns the line and its facilities (which include train tracks, train tracks, train tracks, a train yard, a train station, a repair shop, a train shop, a truck shop, and, of course, a track planter). The Mojave Yard consists of a large, open space with buildings on either end and a large switcher yard in the middle. At the end of the Mojave Yard in the Southwest, there's a track planter. There are 4 directions that the player can enter the Mojave Yard: North, South, East, and West. The Mojave Yard is nestled inside the Mojave Division, and when approached by a player, a title will be displayed saying "Mojave Yard." When the player goes in, the Mojave Yard is greyed out, but the player will be able to see through the building area and the yard. On top of this, Mojave Yard also appears in the Trainyard interface and search center on the Trainyard Map. You can upgrade your Yard Equipment by buying and/or renting build plans, buying them from shops, or by using earned points. Byron, the division engineer, will often be found where the two tracks connect in the North and South ends of the Mojave Yard (East End is to the right when approaching from the West and West End is to the right when approaching from the East). He can be found in the Northern & Southern sides of the Mojave Yard. He has three tracks of his own, which can be used for staging trains. These tracks will be grayed out with a red light at the end of them. By entering a location named Engine (which can be found in the Mojave Station or the Train Shop), they will instead serve as a locomotive.

- Mojave Station The Mojave Station is at the Southern end of the Mojave Yard. The Mojave Station is a classic station. It consists of a train platform with a building on either side of the platform, and a station agent. The Mojave Station is

What's new in Legend Of Traveller:

's upbeat plot you're "a veteran who's been at this for a while." I think ... you're a veteran of shooting chicken heads and trolls in the head on Game Over. At least in that respect. It's good to see some variation on the paranormal genre with some accessibility. JoWood dispelled my anxiety, so let's see what the pros and cons are for us before we hand over our money. The Good ~Confidence-Building VR Puzzle-solving While I am critical of many titles in this medium and it's not guaranteed that VR is for everyone, I do think that this concept covers a wide audience. It's a 3D videogame that revolves around solving puzzles that pop out and stop time itself for a limited time. There's a neon-novel-like mood to this that feels very well done. The plot and game develop further more as you solve more puzzles so it's less like you're stuck until you beat the game. ~Gun Kahlos Saves Lives The gunplay in this game is simple. You aim your guns and shoot them until the enemies drop. While there are enemies in the game, it's nice to know that you're still zeroing your guns and making your best peaces. While aiming may be the only aspect of the game that's lacking, it at least matches the gameplay of the levels. So no one feels "Left 4 Dead" when playing this. ~Simple Navigation The Wiimote's accelerometer is great in this kind of puzzle game and the game uses it well. The camera itself has a nice track ball feel and will pan to go in certain directions if you move it outside of a set area. It's a nice blend of button-based mechanics and the Wiimote and Wii-mote boom-shak movement that you'd expect in a puzzle game. It adds to the fun as you play (if you aren't the type to rage quit in response to an especially hard challenge). ~Some Fun Personas It's nice to see more than just two people gunning things down. There are team-based levels, as well as solo levels. I hope to see more of this in the
