* If you can type, you can design. * InDesign, QuarkXPress, and several other graphics software packages are used to design documents. You can use these types of software to create your own designs as well. * Illustrator is one of the most used software packages when it comes to vector design. * Flash is a popular tool for video production and animation. Tools It's important to note that there are several different ways to manipulate images. Sometimes, one kind of manipulation will yield better results than others. Figures 2.6a through 2.6c (a) Photoshop's Layers panel showing an image with four layers: the original, a layer of effects, another layer with a JPEG file of a pencil sketch, and a layer with a reflected copy of the first layer. (b) An image can have many layers of images, depending on the need. (c) A layer is like a color box within a color box within a color box. It's good to separate different images on separate layers. Layer | Type | Name | Description --- | --- | --- | --- Original | Untitled | Untitled Layer 1 | The layer containing the image and any corrections and enhancements. Effects | Adjustment Layer | Sharpen | A layer with a filter and settings. Using the same filter on a layer with a reflection also creates a greater depth and complexity. Smudge | Adjustment Layer | Blur | Smudges can be added to portions of the image. Tiling | Adjustment Layer | Scale | This layer can be useful for putting an image together to create a tileable image. Reflect | Adjustment Layer | Mirror | This layer enables you to create reflections within the Photoshop document. Photo Layer | Layer | Photo Layer | This is the layer where photo editing can be done. This layer cannot be edited. It's also called "Basic" or "Stroke" in older versions of Photoshop. Layers | General Layering and compositing | Controls Figures 2.6d, 2.6e, 2.6f Layers can be combined with each other using various types of effects. The left image shows six layers of images stacked, with each layer having filters applied. The right image is made using the same six layers, except

Clonal evolution and chimerism in myelodysplastic syndromes. Chromosomal changes during the course of the disease in patients with myelodysplastic syndromes (MDSs) are well established. However, it is more difficult to define the mechanisms involved in clonal evolution of these disorders. Whether and to what extent a single, or a group of, genetic abnormalities are required for the onset and progression of these diseases has still to be determined. The existence of complex chromosomal rearrangements (CMRs) in patients with MDS has pointed towards the role of CMRs in the clonal evolution of this disease. Some of these rearrangements seem to be related to the initiation of the disease and are associated with a poor prognosis. However, mechanisms regulating the selection of these rearrangements and the precise order of events in the evolution of the disease are not well understood. The presence of abnormal clones and subclones of cells with similar genetic abnormalities may be responsible for the heterogeneity of clinical manifestations in patients with MDSs and an increased tendency to relapse. Gene expression profiling of MDSs may help in understanding the mechanisms involved in the progression of MDS.

Q: jQuery Mobile not refreshing after ajax call I have an app that queries an API and I want to refresh my data after the call. I have a function that makes the ajax call which then opens a page where the data is printed out. Now what I want is that when I leave the page that the data is refreshed and its not happening. Here is my markup:

Q: HTML/Javascript - Set value on select box only if select option not selected (for the same select box) I have 2 select boxes which I'm trying to write a bit of javascript to set the selected option of the second select box, based on which option is already selected in the first. The problem is I can't see a way to do this without setting a value attribute on both select boxes. I can just do it by setting the value attribute on both select boxes but that's messy. Here's my code: Select your reason item description item description So when the user selects item in the first select box then it should set origin to item as well as not set origin (as origin already contains item as a value), when the user selects description in the first select box, then it should set origin to description as well as not set origin.

A: It should be pretty simple, just to select the option you want to select:

$(document).ready(function() { $('#reason').change(function() { $('#origin').val($(this).find('option:selected').val()); }); });
```

As mentioned in the comment, you can modify the code to take the value out of the selected option, like this:

```
$(document).ready(function() { $('#reason').change(function() { $('#origin').val($('#reason option:selected').val()); }); });
```

And then finally, here is the example with no selected value at all. Here is a fiddle: In the field of integrated circuit fabrication, the number of transistors that can be formed in a single semiconductor wafer is increasing rapidly as feature sizes are decreasing. However, the ability to integrate large
